doctor-diagnosed arthritis.

You are the Arthritis Foundation.

You play a vital role in our network, where every connection point is crucial to finding a cure and changing lives. Whatever your role — as a volunteer, donor, partner or fundraiser — you uniquely make life so much better for millions of people living with arthritis. YOU ARE US.

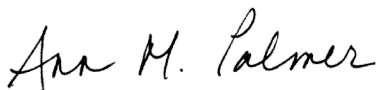

We hope you're proud of all we accomplished together in 2018 — and we're grateful for your steadfast commitment. The Arthritis Foundation has a rich past, spearheading many breakthroughs; our successes come from working hand in hand to find solutions.

Today, we're collaborating with patients even more, along with health care experts, scientists and other partners — including you — to provide the best help and support possible, while fighting for a cure.

In 2018, we brought the Live Yes! Arthritis Network to life. Both in person and online, the arthritis community is coming together like never before. A few years ago, we formalized our can-do philosophy in the tagline, "Champion of Yes." Now we're a movement to help everyone with arthritis live their best life.

Be proud of your contributions. And let's make an even bigger difference as we forge ahead toward a cure.

Thank you for helping put Live Yes! into action day after day.

ADVOCACY

Our passionate army of over 150,000 everyday citizens is on top of the latest policy issues, making sure new laws get enacted to protect all of us. Together, we're breaking down barriers at state and federal levels — pursuing optimal care that makes treatments more affordable and less frustrating to access.

The Live Yes! Arthritis Network Is Changing Lives

Our newest initiative is already gaining ground and is making a life-changing difference. Created by the Arthritis Foundation, the Live Yes! Arthritis Network helps people find strength in each other, manage stress and take control of their health care, personalized for each one's journey.

In person nationwide, our local Live Yes! Connect Groups give those living with arthritis, including parents of children with JA, the chance to meet face to face, discuss common concerns and share tips for living life to the fullest. This new initiative builds on our many established opportunities, like JA camps, Walk to Cure Arthritis and other community activities.

Online our Live Yes! Community is where you can find the forums most relevant to your own needs and interests, join or start conversations and get free advice from health care experts.

Patient insights drive all we do — and our Live Yes! Insights surveys are telling us what people in the arthritis community want and need. Patients themselves guide us as we develop new programs and tools to meet the needs of all ages nationwide, targeted to each market.

By joining the network and sharing their stories, people with arthritis are giving us a clearer and better picture of what the arthritis community wants and needs. It's a dynamic and exciting landscape, and we're constantly responding to the needs of the community.

OA WARRIOR

Here's a memory etched into Raquel Masco's mind: "I was trying to crawl up the stairs on my hands and knees. I had no energy. I wanted to cry, I was in so much pain."

Raquel is a single mom who spent nearly a decade in pain before learning she had osteoarthritis from a traffic accident. She struggled to get out of bed, missed work and was unable to finish her graduate degree because of her pain.

She says finding the Arthritis Foundation was a blessing. "Others know what I'm going through and understand. Hearing the treatment that helped them, going to conferences and knowing what to talk to my doctor about is invaluable."

Today, Raquel runs a nonprofit that empowers single mothers to thrive in everyday life. She's involved in community theater and creates productions that elevate the visibility of people with disabilities. She also volunteers for the Arthritis Foundation, fighting for a cause she cares about.

CONNECTION POINTS

The Arthritis Foundation is accelerating discovery of new treatments for osteoarthritis (OA), the most common form of arthritis, which strikes over 30 million Americans. There's no cure and no known, proven strategy for slowing or stopping OA's progression. Soldiers and athletes are disproportionately affected.

BREAKTHROUGHS

- We've been laying the groundwork for changes in OA treatments for years, working closely with the Food and Drug Administration. In 2018, we convinced the FDA to publish new draft guidance for developing OA drugs, devices and treatments. This shows they are willing to consider innovative trial designs that could speed up the process and reduce costs.
- We spearheaded the OA Center of Excellence, uniting researchers worldwide to study new and better treatment options. The center has invested in six research institutions that will determine identifiable markers for each stage of OA.
- Current research underway is having amazing results. We're perfecting an arthritis "vaccine" to target, stop and repair joint damage. We're also working to advance diagnostic techniques to help pinpoint what will be the most effective treatment.

SCOPE

30+ Million

Americans will benefit from advances made in OA TREATMENT OPTIONS.

TRAINING

In 2018, we awarded

$750,000

to launch new slots for fellowship programs that will help close the gap in the severe shortage of arthritis specialists.

PROGRESS

Over the past seven decades, we've invested

$500+ Million

INTO ARTHRITIS RESEARCH, leading to life-changing discoveries.

RA WARRIOR

What does arthritis have in common with being an editor of a fashion magazine, playing in a rock band and running half-marathons? They are all integral to Renee Cafaro's life.

Renee has been in chronic pain since she was 11. For years, her mom and doctors thought she was just over-reacting from growing pains. But in college, her pain became so severe she could no longer walk to class. Her university refused to provide resources to help because she didn't have a visible disability.

"I felt like a pinball machine with pain all over my body," she remembers. "I could barely see straight, but I didn't want to burden anyone with my suffering."

When she was finally diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis and fibromyalgia, Renee says her family still didn't believe anything was wrong with her. "It wasn't until I found the Arthritis Foundation that my family acknowledged it must be real."

"I have arthritis, but I refuse to have my life stop because of my pain."

CONNECTION POINTS

The Arthritis Foundation played a key role in developing biological interventions for inflammatory forms of arthritis. About 1.5 million Americans have been diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis (RA), which is systemic and can damage organs and impede mobility. Fortunately, there are treatments to help.

EMPOWERMENT

- In 2018, we reached 1,600 patients in 71 Live Yes! RA educational events nationwide. We created this cohesive program to provide RA-specific health information and a common set of tools to improve communication between patients and providers. Local physicians in each market share their expertise and passion.
- We lead the arthritis patient engagement movement. People with arthritis are at the center of our work, and we incorporate their insights into all we do. Patient input not only shapes the health care system and the Arthritis Foundation's efforts, but also influences research. We've trained scores of patients to impact research as partners, advisors and contributors.

Every year arthritis causes more than

100 MILLION DOCTOR VISITS & 6.7 MILLION HOSPITALIZATIONS

ENGAGEMENT

In 2018,

1,600

RA PATIENTS ATTENDED
71 LIVE YES! RA EVENTS across the U.S.

SATISFACTION

98% OF EVENT

PARTICIPANTS said they would likely or very likely recommend the Live Yes! RA program to others.

COMMUNICATION

After the event,

72% STRONGLY AGREED

that improving communication with their doctor is important for improving their RA treatments.

JA WARRIOR

Laniese Penner is a recent high school graduate in Kansas. She's passionate about basketball, cross-country and anything highly competitive in gymnastics. She was diagnosed with juvenile arthritis in fourth grade and spent the entire summer before that unable to do anything, including the hikes she relished.

"A lot of people think, 'It's just stiffness or soreness, buck up,'" Laniese says. "It's much more than just pain. There are so many misperceptions about JA." She notes that people with autoimmune arthritis have weaker immune systems, so they have good days and bad.

Laniese says the people surrounding her have made a huge difference — "to be able to have people that you can trust and share with." She was encouraged through Arthritis Foundation JA Conferences, seeing "Wow, I'm not alone." Her mother, Staci, is a committed Arthritis Ambassador, urging policymakers to advance arthritis-friendly laws and more research.

The medical community has played a big role in Laniese's life, and she wants to give back. "In college, I'm planning on majoring in biochemistry and going into something to help other people with arthritis."

Read more at arthritis.org/AR-Laniese

"I'm not letting arthritis define me. You just know there's going to be a better day coming."

CONNECTION POINTS

In the U.S., an estimated 300,000 children have juvenile arthritis or other rheumatic condition. The Arthritis Foundation is committed to giving JA families a platform for sharing their experiences while working toward personalized treatment plans for each diagnosis and a cure.

PERSPECTIVES

- In person and virtually, families from around the country shared their perspectives about the impact of juvenile idiopathic arthritis (JIA) on daily life and the challenges that matter most to them. Co-hosted by the Arthritis Foundation, the 2018 externally-led JIA Patient-Focused Drug Development meeting included FDA staff, industry leaders and researchers.
- Our 34th National JA Conference, held in two locations, touched the lives of over 1,800 participants, representing more than 400 families. We reached even more kids, teens and young adults with arthritis through 1,400 JA Power Packs, over 40 JA camps and 112 family day events.

60% of those surveyed would be uncomfortable requesting time off work to manage an illness like arthritis. Yet an estimated 172 million workdays are lost each year due to arthritis. In all, arthritis costs our economy $304 billion annually.

60% don't know people with arthritis are at increased risk of developing other diseases, like heart disease (50% of those with arthritis) or diabetes (47%).
